Interesting article, but it's from Oregon Public Broadcasting, not the Oregonian.

Hi Everyone – I just thought you might all be interested in this article on aerial spraying and drift from herbicides on the Oregon coast. There's one reference to CZARA and to an EPA memo that we've used as part of our rationale. It's also interesting to see that the state legislature might consider introducing some measures to add buffers to streams (not sure if that would be for non-fish bearing though). Also, note that it's not just Triangle Lake that's discussed but other recent incidents in the Oregon coastal area.

Sorry if you've seen this already – nice to see some press.
